Not quite sure about the analysis? Seems that the authors need to look to Tassie to see what happens when you rid yourselves of a bad government — though in SA's case, we had a very bad government — to see what happens to growth when a new government committed to change and not hating the community and business. In six months' time, SA will be well on the way.

JOHN

I'm moving back to Adelaide from Sydney at the end of the year with my young family. My missus is from Sydney and is really looking forward to it. We're both feeling optimistic — just remember there are probably a lot of expats like me waiting for the right time. Friends of ours who are both from Sydney are moving down here purely for the chance to buy a property with acreage in the Hills. This is a huge attraction to a city like Adelaide, and though Sydney is definitely the engineroom for Australia's economy, I'm moving back because you can actually have a lifestyle and afford a decent house.

CHRIS

Agriculture is doing well at the moment, with record prices and exports helping our economy. No thanks to governments — this is private enterprise doing well for a change.

ROD

SA couldn't have bottomed out any further without dropping off the planet. LUKE

Great news for SA. Now watch all the whingers come out of the woodwork. Of course, Marshall will try to take credit for it all.

ROB

When you are at zero, any growth looks good.

ROGER

The Australian economy growth actually depends on how much wine, meat, milk powder and iron the Chinese want to buy.

BRIAN

It's called "confidence" — the shadow of secrecy has been lifted ELISABETH

I'm waiting for the next Budget to see how much Labor spent. The big question is whether we hit $15 billion debt. RAELENE
